SOLINET Obtains Additional Discounts for Libraries from LexisNexis

ATLANTA – (March 9, 2009) – SOLINET has obtained additional discounts for libraries from longtime partner, LexisNexis.

In light of the current global economic crisis, SOLINET, the fiscal agent for the aggregation of LexisNexis Academic, revisited LexisNexis to advocate for additional reductions for libraries. As a result, those who renew subscriptions for the premier research and reference solution will be eligible to purchase LexisNexis Congressional Research Digital Collection (CRDC) Prospective Module for 40¢ per FTE. SOLINET members will receive an additional discount.

In addition, subscribers who take advantage of this offer will have flat pricing on LexisNexis Academic and LexisNexis CRDC Prospective Module through fiscal year 2010-2011.

“LexisNexis Academic is one of the most heavily-used databases in academic libraries. LexisNexis CRDC Prospective Module is a powerful research tool that provides information regarding U.S. policymaking decisions from 2004 to the present. We are pleased that LexisNexis continues to support us in our endeavors to offer more affordable pricing solutions for individual libraries, consortia and information organizations nationwide,” said Ed McBride, SOLINET’s Chief Marketing and Outreach Officer.
